DigitalProImageGuides.com Many new users of Photoshop have fond memories of using that first and only program and don't know any different. You can be a skilled and productive user of the program but still not be 100 percent sure of what your options are or how to do something. Photoshop is one of the most commonly used software products in the world and has many features that can save you time and money. By using some knowledge of Photoshop's capabilities, along with some tutorials on the web, you can learn how to use it to make stunning images. Once you understand how to work with layers, masks, paths, and so forth, you can create great images. Keep reading to see how to use a little knowledge to know Photoshop in a few easy steps. Photoshop 101 Photoshop is incredibly powerful, and there are many people who use it as their sole image manipulation tool. However, many of us also use other image manipulation tools that have similar capabilities. If you decide to get started in Photoshop, you should learn its strengths and weaknesses — and also how Photoshop compares to other image-editing programs. My books, Taking Photos the Adobe Way and Understanding Photoshop, can help you get up to speed with Photoshop quickly. In this section, I offer a crash course on how to use Photoshop to create images and how to deal with common issues and problems.

Getting familiar with Photoshop Before you can use Photoshop, you need to understand how to use a program and get familiar with your options, controls, and features. To start working with Photoshop, open an image and follow these steps: 1. Choose File⇒Open to bring up the Open dialog box. 2. Choose Photoshop (CS4) in the Open dialog box, and click OK. Photoshop CS4 is the latest version of the Creative Suite 4, and is the version most often referred to as CS4. There are several other versions of Photoshop available for use, including Photoshop Elements and Photoshop Lightroom, so keep that in mind when you read about Photoshop or when you look

Photoshop Elements The name of an image is the name of the file it is saved in. It appears on the file icon and when you open the file in Photoshop Elements.

The name you choose is what you'll give the image. If you want to change the name of an image, you have three options:

- Use the menu bar to change the name of the image
- Use the keyboard shortcuts to change the name of the image
- Use the filter bar to change the name of the image

Step 1. Opening an image

Open a file. Now, you have several options available to you. Click the icon in the top left corner of the workspace to display the File menu. Click Open to open your image. Select Save or Save As from the File menu to open the Save or Save as dialog.

Step 2. Select File Name

Locate your image in the list of files on the left. Click the image. Enter the new name for the image in the File Name box.

Step 3. Select File Type

Now, you can change the type of file to save your image. Click the file type you want to select. The new image will be created in that type. You can choose from the following options:

Image courtesy of Christina Krakowiak, Vancouver Courier New Westminster City Council has voted to scale back a controversial plan that was the subject of much controversy and legal challenges. The original concept for the multi-dwelling units on the site of a former industrial building on 24th Avenue South between 18th and 19th streets was approved in 2013. The city said it would be developed for low-income seniors as a means to address affordable housing. The approved plan was developed by Impact Housing as a partnership with the city, Vancity and a small development firm. The development would have comprised

50 multi-unit townhomes, with the second storey of each townhome dedicated to commercial uses. However, a series of legal challenges and community complaints forced the developer to rethink the project. Council on Tuesday declined to extend Impact's planning permit, which was slated to last until late 2019. Instead, the city issued a development permit for the first phase of the project, which allows for the construction of 17 multi-unit dwellings and nine commercial uses. Each multi-dwelling unit is meant to provide a maximum of three bedrooms with a combined living, dining and kitchen area. The city has developed a strategy to encourage developments that preserve the built form of the city, and ensure each building and unit is unique and distinct from the others. As part of that strategy, the number of multi-unit developments in New Westminster is to be reduced. The concept will allow Impact to reduce its funding burden for the project, which includes the environmental permit needed to build on an industrial site. Impact will be asked to spend $7.6 million to construct the first phase of the project, which is expected to be completed in 2022. “This is a long-term project for us. We need to maintain our focus,” said Impact CEO John McKay. “We have a lot of financial obligations and I know there’s a lot of concern and a lot of disappointment, but I would ask for your patience.” McKay said Impact has plans for two more phases of the project. The company will continue to seek amendments to the development permit that were requested by the community at Tuesday’s meeting, including a higher level of commercial space

What's New in the Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 16?

Obama's foreign policy was a Bush policy. But it was Obama's foreign policy. Obama didn't build a "red line," he was merely trying to avoid another war; then he had to go find Osama; then he had to send more forces to Afghanistan. Now, today, he's gearing up for war in Syria. He's telegraphing war all over the place. This is not his style. He's Obama. The subject of an escalation of military action is on his mind. "I do think that over the next several weeks, you're going to see more Syrians getting killed by their own government because of this president's decision," he told ABC News. "We're going to be sending a message to the Assad regime and to the Iranians and to the Russians, that we are changing the rules of the road," Obama said, seeming to anticipate what the public would blame him for. Today's speech at the White House was a typical Obama executive speech — and it's this style of speech that I believe is fundamentally killing him politically. Both Obama and McCain have the same ideas. McCain, a militarist, is currently peddling the usual hyper-nationalist canard about the United States having to “lead the world.” He also believes we must use the military to deal with Iran and North Korea. Obama, who talks about how the world is coming to an end — and was captured at a “fundamentalist” mosque in Indonesia — is now telling us that we must “lead the world.” Obama is also making the point — which is wrong — that America is weak and disorganized when it comes to foreign policy. He also says America’s enemies will take advantage of this. Both of them believe in war. Why is it that the only two things the two men agree on are that war is good for America and that Americans have to invade foreign countries? Obama now claims he is somehow better than Bush at managing the American war machine. This is nonsense. I believe Obama is one of the worst presidents when it comes to using the military overseas in recent memory. He has a record of weakness, error
